Looking for work as an ex-felon

Prepare your resume:

A resume describes your abilities and experiences. They can be simple, but for people with criminal records, resumes are extra valuable. They give you a chance to choose which past experiences you want to highlight. That means you can put the focus on what you can offer instead of your record.

Resumes are not a list of everything you have done. Highlight just the parts of your experience that make you a good candidate for a job. See below for what to include on your resume.

Section	Information to include
Contact information	Place this at the top of your resume and include your full name, home address, phone number and an email address.
Career Objective or Summary	Write the career you want to be hired for, such as "Retail Salesperson." Or write 2-3 sentences to highlight skills or accomplishments that show why you are a good fit for the position.
Work Experience	A list of past jobs you've held. Include employer/company name, city and state, your job title, dates you held the job, major responsibilities, accomplishments, promotions etc.
Education	List education and training you have done. Include school or program name, city and state, dates attended, and any diplomas, degrees, or certifications you have earned.
Volunteering and activities	List volunteer or community work you have done. Also include other activities that can show your responsibilities.
Military Experience	List dates of military service, rank obtained and branch. Write in any special training or skills you gained.
